1. Presentation by Dr. Carrie Miller: Conceptualizing Quality in Nursing Simulation Education

Summary: Simulation-based experiences in nursing education have become commonplace. There is a general understanding of the benefit of simulation; however, the measure of simulation quality is evolving. This presentation discusses the essentials of defining simulation quality using INACSL's Healthcare Simulation Standards of Best Practice. These include best practices of simulation facilitation, prebriefing, debriefing, and professional integrity. Implementing simulation best practices into nursing curricula can impact patient outcomes and safety. Simulation-based education quality can promote nurse graduates' readiness for clinical practice.

2. Discussion with Education Subcommittee Members
